▶ Meet Mikey - (Michael Stolzenberg)

Last summer, Mikey was a typical eight year old boy. He was an avid athlete and had just earned the starting quarterback position on his pee wee tackle football team. He loved playing lacrosse, riding his bike and all the other activities most 8-year olds thrive on.

That changed the morning of July 22, 2008, when Mikey was rushed to the ER with a bacterial infection that wasn't responding to antibiotics. Shortly after arriving, he went into septic shock and the doctors were forced to put him on a ventilator. His condition quickly worsened to the point of hopelessness, and as a last ditch effort, he was put on continuous dialysis. The doctors and nurses at Joe DiMaggio's Children's Hospital made heroic efforts over the next seven weeks to keep Mikey alive.

Miraculously, Mikey survived with his intelligence and wit; however, oxygen deprivation to his limbs resulted in the need to amputate both of his hands and both of his feet. Mikey will have to live with the challenging results of his illness for the rest of his life.

The Prognosis -

Michael's only hope of regaining some independence and normalcy in his life is to have superior prosthetics. The prosthetics that will allow him to participate in physical activities and to take care of himself in any manner are not the type approved by health insurance. While many amputees can survive with the basic prosthetics covered by insurance, they are usually only faced with one amputation - not four. Compounding the issue is that Michael is now 9 and the four prosthetics will need to be replaced bi-annually as he grows. This is not a task for one family to face alone.

Our Goal -

Mikey dreams of walking and running again - of being able to feed himself and having some independence and quality of life. Please help us make all of Mikey's dreams come true!
